

Longlands: Takes Double Gold for Devon

Luxury glamping site, Longlands, North Devon has been named best Glamping Business at the Devon Tourism Awards.

Owner Bella Given said "We are thrilled and honoured to have won such a prestigious award, particularly in light of the high standards and quality of all the other finalists. We are particularly proud to be a double Gold Winner of the Glamping Category. Staying in luxurious surroundings under canvas, listening to the sounds of Mother Nature is a totally different experience to staying in a cottage or hotel. It is tremendously gratifying that Glamping is now recognised in its own right and is testament to the hard work of everyone in this new sector."

Longlands' five luxurious safari lodges nestle in a private secluded valley on the western border of Exmoor National Park and look out over the North Devon coast. The team at Longlands have thought of everything you could possibly need for your stay; from natural aromatherapy products in the bathroom & luxury treats for canine friends to a detailed adventure book about the area. They even provide home cooked meals using the best West Country ingredients and an onsite shop stocked with delicious local produce.

Longlands was the very first Glamping site in the UK to be awarded a Gold Standard by VisitEngland in their new Glamping accreditation scheme in 2016, finalists in the SouthWest Tourism Awards and nominated to represent Devon & the SouthWest in the national VisitEngland awards in April 2017, plus Tripadvisor Platinum Green Leader award to boot.
